CONTACT: Jana Carter Director, Youth Planning and Development Chesterfield County, VA 804 796-7100 carterj@chesterfield.gov

September 12, 2012

Chesterfield County Named One of the 100 Best Communities for Young People by America's Promise Alliance and ING U.S.

Annual Competition Recognizes Communities that Prioritize Youth Education and Well-Being

Chesterfield County, Virginia—Chesterfield County today was named one of America's Promise Alliance's 100 Best Communities for Young People presented by ING. The national award was given to Chesterfield County to recognize its outstanding and innovative work in promoting high school graduation and for its programs and services that make it an outstanding place for youths to live, learn and grow.

Youth-serving programs designed to engage, inspire and support young people from birth through high school earned Chesterfield County a 100 Best win for the sixth time. Recognizing that a healthy start is important, the county's Coalition for Active Children works with 15 community partners to offer programs that address childhood obesity issues and help families make healthy choices. The county's parenting chesterfield.gov, provides easy access to user-friendly parenting information that includes tips on addressing common parenting issues, a local resource directory and links to related websites.

Chesterfield County's longstanding commitment to providing a variety of educational pathways has helped the community achieve an on-time graduation rate of nearly 87 percent. A Drop Out Prevention Task Force, comprised of school and community representatives, provides a systematic approach to ensuring that students stay in school and graduate on time. Efforts start in elementary school, where an "early warning system" signals school counselors when a child has five absences. Advocates reach out to the child and family to reinforce the message that, "Every day counts" and to offer assistance in addressing attendance barriers. The Success program allows academically struggling eighth graders to complete two ninth grade core classes in summer school and receive mentoring throughout their freshman year for a smoother transition to high school. Twice each year, drop-in fairs provide an opportunity to connect students who have dropped out with resources that will help them earn a high school diploma.

"Being named one of America's Promise Alliance's 100 Best Communities for the sixth time is significant, and demonstrates that Chesterfield County is steadfastly working to provide our young people with every opportunity to succeed," said Chesterfield County Board of Supervisors Chairman Dan Gecker. "So many dedicated people and programs contributed to this recognition, and it further reinforces our belief that a focus on our young citizens pays dividends to the entire community."

"As young people across the country go back to school, it is especially timely to recognize communities like Chesterfield County that have come together to make supporting young people a top priority and that are committed to helping young Americans reach their full potential," said John Gomperts, America's Promise Alliance president and CEO. "The 100 Best winners are doing outstanding work delivering the Five Promises that create the conditions for all young people to have the best chance for success. We hope the example set by these communities provides inspiration for others to take action."

At noon EST on Sept. 12, Gomperts will join America's Promise Alliance Chair Alma Powell and ING Foundation President Rhonda Mims at the Newseum in Washington, D.C., to officially announce the 100 winning communities during a live webcast.

"The increase we have seen in graduation rates over the past few years is due, in large part, to the hard work communities such as Chesterfield County have done to make sure their youth have access to an outstanding education and support services," said Rhonda Mims, president of the ING Foundation and head of the ING U.S. Office of Corporate Responsibility. "It is also important for ING to partner with organizations such as America's Promise Alliance so we can share these best practices and play a role in improving student achievement and the nation's economy."

Chesterfield County will receive a $2,500 grant, signage identifying the community as one of the nation's 100 Best Communities for Young People, and access to America's Promise Alliance's community development resources.

The 100 Best competition is part of the Grad Nation campaign, a large and growing movement of dedicated individuals, organizations and communities working together to end the dropout crisis. The goal of Grad Nation is to raise the national high school graduation rate to 90 percent by 2020, with no school graduating fewer than 80 percent of its students on time.

All communities entering the 100 Best competition completed a rigorous application in which they provided details on how their existing programs and initiatives help deliver the Five Promises—resources identified by America's Promise as being critical to the development of healthy, successful children: caring adults; safe places; a healthy start; effective education; and opportunities to help others. Applicants also were asked to describe how different sectors of their community work together to help children and families overcome challenges. Most importantly, communities were judged on the strength and innovation of their efforts and programs to help young people graduate from high school prepared for college and the 21st century workforce.

In its sixth year, the competition experienced its greatest interest to date with nominations from more than 320 communities representing all 50 states, Washington, D.C., the U.S. Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico. Winners were chosen by a distinguished panel of judges that included 2012 National Teacher of the Year Rebecca Mieliwocki, 2012 National Superintendent of the Year Heath Morrison, National Urban League President Marc Morial, and GLSEN Executive Director Eliza Byard.

Two youth representatives also were named as selection panelists. These include Austin Bargmann, 15, from Brighton, Colo., a two-time 100 Best winner, and Ashley Levanduski, 17, from Paso Robles, Calif., who serves as a volunteer coach with an America's Promise partner organization, The First Tee, an international youth organization that introduces golf and its inherent values to young people.

A list of all 2012 winners can be found at AmericasPromise.org/100Best. The webcast can be viewed at AmericasPromise.org/100Bestwebcast.

About America's Promise Alliance

America's Promise Alliance is the nation's largest partnership dedicated to improving the lives of children and youth. We bring together more than 400 national organizations representing nonprofit groups, businesses, communities, educators and policymakers. Through our Grad Nation campaign, we mobilize Americans to end the high school dropout crisis and prepare young people for college and the 21st century workforce. Building on the legacy of our Founding Chairman General Colin Powell, America's Promise believes the success of young people is grounded in the Five Promises—Caring Adults, Safe Places, A Healthy Start, Effective Education, and Opportunities to Help Others. For more information, visit Americas Promise.org.

About ING U.S.

ING U.S. constitutes the U.S.-based retirement, investment management and insurance operations of Dutch-based ING Groep N.V. (NYSE: ING). In the U.S., the ING family of companies offers a comprehensive array of financial services to retail and institutional clients, which includes life insurance, retirement plans, mutual funds, managed accounts, alternative investments, institutional investment management, annuities, employee benefits and financial planning. ING U.S. holds top-tier rankings in key U.S. markets and serves approximately 13 million customers across the nation. For more information, visit http://ing.us.

About the ING Foundation

The ING Foundation's mission is to improve the quality of life in communities where ING operates and its employees and customers live. Through charitable giving and employee volunteerism, the Foundation focuses on programs in the areas of financial education, children's education and physical education. For more information, visit http://www.ing-usafoundation.com or connect with us on Facebook (https://www.facebook.com/act2impact) and Twitter (@INGact2impact).

###